

Sillans waterfall

Sillans-la-Cascade

Detail des remparts (©Stefano Blanc - PNR Verdon)

A waterfall where the waters of Bresque increased with those of the source of the castle of Bresc and the Oure valley rush into a small lake swirling from a height of 42m.

After exploring the small streets full of charm of this village of the hinterland, enjoy, from the panoramic viewpoint, the highest waterfall in the Var which vaporizes its spray when hitting the pond surface with emerald waters, a small charming corner where you can cool off in the spring or summer.

The Walls (B)

The walls appear to date from the medieval period, at a time when the villages wanted to protect from attacks of various origins: looters, war, plague,... If the castle was completely refurbished by the Marquis de Castellane, it is not the same thing for the medieval walls. The crenellated part of the tower was rebuilt in the 19th century.

The parish church of Saint-Etienne (C)

The Church of Sillans-la-Cascade is under the patronage of the relics of Saint-Etienne, a martyr whose feast is celebrated on 3 August. The church preserves a relic of the first martyr, Saint-Etienne. It was brought in the end of the 12th century by a member of the noble family of Pontevès returning from a crusade. It succeeded an ancient chapel dedicated to Saint-Laurent, published in 1079 in a bull of Pope Gregory VI. It still existed in the beginning of the 19th century.

The Castle (D)

Sillans-la-Cascade was a village with three castles: the first one, a medieval castle, ruined in the late Middle Ages. The second one, built in 1609 in the surrounding area, was destroyed during the Revolution. The third one, built in the early 19th century by Rolland Sillans in the middle of a park, was bought by the town in 1992 to the Count François de Castellane.

Sensitive Natural Area ... a natural heart (E)

The ENS of Sillans is a Sensitive Natural Area whose natural and landscaped heritage accounted for the purchase of 367ha of natural lands by the County Council of the Var from 1989 and 1992. A Departmental Property whose objective is to preserve the natural heritage and make it accessible to the public. Some significant improvements have been carried out to allow the public access to the belvedere opposite the waterfall in total safety. Sillans la Cascade is classified as "natural heart".
